In FIFA 22, professionals now have the opportunity to be included in their country's national team, as well as hone their skills on the domestic level. With the new HyperMotion Technology, players now have four ways to improve their skills: training at the training ground, in-game training, or with the FIFA Phenomenal Skills Trainer. As players get better, their attributes increase in both strength and explosiveness. To find out more about FIFA 22, and to experience this unique and novel in-game training, make sure you tune in to ESPN's FIFA 22 Premier League Live from August 5th to August 11th, between the hours of 1 pm and 2 am PST. The high-fidelity 3D game engine translates and processes the audio in the live camera view from the pitch, allowing players to hear the referee's whistle and game sounds. In addition to the first-person perspective, special visual effects such as explosions, fireballs, bouncing balls, and crowd noise can be experienced in the game. Players are also more intimately connected to the sport and its players, as they can easily track players' movements, take their skills into account when passing or tackling, and work on their own technique or strength-based training. THE ULTIMATE EXPERIENCE: Every time, place and situation is captured in stunning detail.
