Some people theorize that Spinal Tap is a spoof. I say it's true; it's very true. (And yes, I am from New Jersey.) Some people believe there's a "real" band called The Last Hard Men. Spinal Tap agrees; it's true. But the most important thing about Spinal Tap is the idea that it's all true. That's the part that makes it the most fun. That's the part that ensures that we will never forget what we saw here today. We just met the real-life creators of their characters, and we sat down with them and they answered questions about what it was like to direct the film, what they did to keep the crew excited about the project, and what the experience of working with one of the funniest movie comedies of all time was like. You know, if you'd prefer to watch the movie first, that's up to you, and this interview will give you the opportunity to do that. But if you come for the behind-the-scenes stories, then read on. Where did the idea for Spinal Tap come from? This is a curious tale. A lot of things in this world have been accredited to The Beatles, but really, this was just a bunch of guys, some of whom were accomplished musicians and writers, who got together and created a world that was a little bit more fictional than the real one. And the movie has taken on a life of its own. And to this day, people who have seen the movie remember it, and the characters, just like the members of the real band, are still just as fresh. When we created Spinal Tap we were trying to get that sense of humor, that kind of irreverence and wit, and that character of David St. Hubbins from the Beatles. A lot of people have thought, "Oh, that is absolutely Spinal Tap," but really, when it's named after the Beatles, and it's mentioned that there are six guys in the band, it's sort of like the "casting" part of casting the movie. Was the casting of the members a difficult thing? Oh, totally. We'd hear that a lot, and somebody would say, "Do you have them, too?" which was kind of refreshing.

And we have one of the main actors, Harry Shearer, in some of our videos. And a lot of people recognized
him

What's New in the Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.1.1)?

Q: Plot direction of gravitational force I know how to plot the position of a particle in the centre of a central force, like this:

$$X''[t] == (-m * X[t] * F[t] \text{Cos}[\text{theta}[t]])$$

But the question is: what is the direction of the gravitational force? A:

 The gravitational force acts at a constant vector. We have the usual general radial case $F[t_] = -G m \{1, 0, 0\}$ and $\theta[t_] = t$
 We get $X'[t] == (-G m (1 \cos[t] + 0 * \sin[t])/1)$ $Y'[t] == (G m (0 + 0 * \cos[t])/1)$

The initial conditions

$$X[0] == X_0 \quad Y[0] == 0$$

$$\theta[0] == 0 \quad \text{We get}$$

$$X[t] == -G m t$$

$$\cos[t]/1 \quad Y[t] == G m t$$

$$\cos[t]/1 \quad \theta[t] == t$$

We note the force acts
always in the same direction, as usual.
