Xforce Keygen This project will improve the therapeutic care of patients with kidney failure by creating a longitudinal database of patients in the Public Assistance Program (PAP) of the Department of Social Services of the City of New York. PAP provides home health care and community-based services to the poor; kidney failure is a major contributor to death among PAP recipients. Thus, a database of current health status, medication use, and goals of care for all PAP patients will be created to improve patient care for kidney failure. This project will initially address the needs of young adults. All PAP patients beginning dialysis treatment, or having a GFR less than 20 ml/min per 1.73m2 for at least 90 days will be identified. Patients who are 18-39 years old will be enrolled for a follow-up study; the cohort will be re-evaluated at six months and one year following the initiation of dialysis treatment. The aims of the study are: 1) to document the incidence of and type of dialysis, and related clinical outcomes in young adults; 2) to document the
