What's New in the Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.2)?

Mesothelin (MSLN) is a cell surface glycoprotein and tumor antigen ([@bib1]; [@bib3]; [@bib7]; [@bib13]). It is highly expressed in mesotheliomas, and is widely used as a marker for mesothelioma ([@bib4]; [@bib5]; [@bib11]; [@bib15]; [@bib21]; [@bib22]; [@bib24]). In recent studies, we identified two novel mesothelin variants, including a non-glycosylated msln^{K24E/F31E} mutant, with a potential maturation defect that is likely to be associated with malignant phenotype ([@bib8]; [@bib16]; [@bib20]). The functional significance of msln variants is unknown, but this fact is certainly a matter of concern for future investigations. Various procedures have been used for the characterization of novel msln variants. In one approach, the entire genomic sequence encoding amino acid 24--38 of msln ([Figure 1A][#fig1]{ref-type="fig"}) was inserted upstream of the immunoglobulin signal peptide (SP) in the light chain (lambda-Igλ, mlgλ) and heavy chain (κ-Igκ) by overlap extension ([@bib9]; [@bib14]). This strategy resulted in different point mutations in msln; a missense mutation at amino acid 31 (G31R or G to R), and nonsense mutations at amino acid 38 (T38* or T to ) ([@bib8]; [@bib16]). In another approach, only the 1st extracellular loop (ECL1) was inserted downstream of the SP of mlgκ; this led to a G31D mutation, a non-sense mutation at the second extracellular loop (ECL2; T38A), and a mutation at the transmembrane domain (residues 24--38) (T24I, T25V, I31K, V32M, or S33C) ([@bib20]). In this study, we compared the function of novel msln variants in immunization with the aforementioned mlgκ, and two other fusion proteins with different maturation and secretion mechanisms; secretory Ig
