Intestinal carcinoid tumours are uncommon malignant lesions of the small intestine which are reported in man. Four dogs, including a spayed female collie mix, a male mixed breed dog and 2 male German Shepherd dogs, were diagnosed to have intestinal carcinoid tumours based on histopathologic examination of their bowel tissue. The mean age at time of diagnosis was 6.5 years (range, 3-10 years). Grossly, the tumors were submucosal and intramural and were variably sized, ranging from 2-4 cm. Microscopically, these tumours were composed of neoplastic cells with eosinophilic granular cytoplasm, with oval to elongate nuclei, some of which were arranged in nests. The tumours were confined to the intestinal wall, with no evidence of metastasis. Carcinoid tumours of the intestinal tract and urinary tract can occur in dogs, but are rare. In dogs these tumours may originate from enterochromaffin cells of the gastrointestinal tract or the carcinoid syndrome. These neoplasms appear to be more common in dogs than in man. However, a surveillance programme similar to that of the human population may prove to be beneficial.The report named: West VaR , published as of 10/18/2001 is now available for viewing on the website.
