These are the three pillars that have kept our country strong. Their importance is clear when we consider America's spot as the world leader in many fields, including economic prosperity, military strength, and technological advances. However, these three values have been violated by certain progressive groups for many decades now. This is no more evident than in the case of the treatment of women. Recently, a large number of women in the US filed a lawsuit to decoupling the salaries of men and women in the workplace. First, they cited the wage gap as a reason for the violation.

However, it was soon discovered that only women earn lower pay than men at the same job. To increase the wage disparity by income, the arguments to be continued, some progressive groups believe that women should be allowed to have individual leave days that men cannot take. This would also cause a reduction in the total number of workers in each company, which would in turn cause a decrease in the demand for jobs. Consequently, the reduction in the demand for jobs would decrease the total amount of income for both men and women. This would further reduce the overall income disparity between men and women. Following the arguments, most labor unions have backed the lawsuit. In union negotiations, employers and unions conduct negotiations over the number of hours and wages of each worker. If an employer demands a higher wage for a woman than for a man, they have to represent it to the bargaining table. Because women make more than men at the same job, the firm would likely demand a higher wage. These arguments are supported by the fact that the average salary of men is $26.46 and the average salary of women is $24.53. The difference in the average salary of women and men is $2.93.
