They say that Starcraft is unplayable without hotkeys, I'm a huge fan of hotkeys for the craftings, basically during the coop campaign the crafting hotkeys are simply taken away from you and you must do all the work yourself. The effect is very naturalistic, a basic player will fail out in the first mission while a slightly better player will slowly learn and adapt until they really have a grasp on the game and mechanics. Every mission is a complete sandbox, all resources are made available by a dedicated AI and players can even get supply crates dropped in for them. Everything from health, minerals, gas, food, ores, etc is freely available to the player; no gold or resources are taken away from them. While they were nice to have as an added feature they just ended up becoming an annoyance and it made us less likely to play the game. The only time they are in use is when a player is selecting items and units from their barracks to construct and start their mission. Starcraft Cooperative Campaign Cooperative We wanted Starcraft to be cooperative from the moment we found out we could gain access to the campaign maps, since then we have been working to achieve a full on cooperative experience. Every single mission from start to end is cooperative, even if you lose all of your unit's the other player still has a chance to get victory for the both of you though unlikely. In a very few select missions you will have to work hard to work together as you start off with bases on opposite sides of the map, these can be very challenging but extremely rewarding as you get the sense of saving your friend from their demise.

with the exception of airyards i'm not actually sure of the other ones, but they don't really matter. People seem to want to do this thing where they split everything up by individual parts of a big game (like base, strategies, troop types) and then use their own tools (like a base builder) to build and edit them. This one you need a csv or a thing that can read csv so that you can add units to it. In the event that you DO want to play this mod as a base set up though, here's how to do it. You'll need as many of the Starcraft maps as you have bases to put it. Load them up in a base builder of choice, match up all of the tiles in the map. Merge the ones that need to be matched, save, exit basebuilder, and press ctrl+shift+F2 to open command prompt. Paste in the following line: This is a sound file, and was made with the same 'wapi.sc' command to be used in the same folder as this err_* file. Unlike with the err_* file, if someone gives us just wapi.sc we'll need to manually install it or add it to the mod. If someone gives us the mod we haven't heard of before, we'll want to be aware of just how long it will take to download and install. If that's the case for a simple mod like this, it can take hours or days depending on what our connection can handle. So there's no guarantee we will be able to get them, and there's also no guarantee we won't lose them on some corrupted or partially updated save that makes the link dead, or the save non-readable. That said, as with Renaka.zip and RenakaUMS.zip, we're not going to have to grab the entire Mod Archive and install it via my custom launcher or the like. (It might be nice to have a separate client file for this, to have some sense of the difference between it and the mod, though.) We don't actually have to download or extract the mod archive at all! 5ec8ef588b
