===== A recently developed P-selectin glycoprotein ligand-1 (PSGL-1) inhibitor, FC-14, was shown to reduce infiltration of neutrophils and platelets into the brain \[@B1\]. However, neutropenia or thrombocytopenia can occur and these can be serious in some patients. We report a case of intracranial hemorrhage (ICH) during treatment with FC-14. CASE REPORT ===== A 72-year-old woman was transferred to our emergency room with a headache and nausea and vomiting. She had a history of an uncomplicated appendectomy 3 months before admission. Her vital signs were stable on arrival. A neurological examination revealed no abnormal findings, but there was a petechial rash on the neck. Computed tomography (CT) of the brain showed a left temporal ICH with intraventricular extension and a left pons ICH
